DRILLING A SIX MILE TUNNEL THROUGH BASE OF ROCKIES

Start of the Moffat Tunnel, which is being drilled for the State of Colorado through six miles of solid rock under the Continental Divide, in the heart of the Rockies. The east portal is at Tolland and the photo shows the west portal near Vasquez, with the first braces in place. The tunnel will be 9,239 feet above sea level and will reduce the distance between Denver and Salt Lake City by 23.13 miles, the elevation of the highest point of the tracks by 2,421 feet, and the maximum grade from four per cent. to two per cent., and the running time between Denver and Salt Lake City by more than an hour. It is estimated that the cost will be $5,250,000.

est of Australia and New Zealand, the provision of a naval base at Singapore is essential for ensuring the mobility necessary to provide security of trade of the Empire in eastern waters, and the necessity for maintenance of safe passage along the great trade route to the east through the Mediterranean and the Red Sea. It also urged the necessity of maintenance by Great Britain of home defence by an air force sufficiently strong to give adequate protection against air attack by the strongest air force within striking distance of her shores.

LONDON, Nov. 12 — Enormous crowds and brilliant sunshine marked the celebration of Armistice Day here Sunday. Naval military and air force detachments were stationed on either side of the nave of Westminster Abbey, and four guardsmen were posted at the grave of the unknown soldier. After the two minutes silence the great gathering in the Abbey sang "O God our Help in Ages Past," and a short sermon was delivered. Then followed the procession past the grave of the unknown soldier, headed by Their Majesties King George and Queen Mary.

PARIS, Nov. 12 — France celebrated the fifth anniversary of the Armistice on Sunday with more pomp and solemnity, but less exuberance and greater intensity of feeling than displayed since the last shot of the war. The momentous events in Europe, the unrest along the Rhine, and the return to the Reich of one of the men responsible for their losses, all tended to make this day not one of rejoicing for the people of France. The Paris ceremony was one of great display and centred around the tomb of the unknown soldier.

ANOTHER MONARCH GOING

ATHENS, Nov. 12 — King George will comply with the request made by the military republic faction that he leave Greece for a brief period, pending clearing of the general situation. It is understood the monarch will depart for two months and he will either appoint a regent or ask the Government to constitute a regency. Dynastic questions will be discussed by the assembly later.

BERLIN PUBLIC IS APATHETIC

BERLIN, Nov. 12 — The present whereabouts of the German Crown Prince is not known, but it is announced in official quarters that Frederick Wilhelm spent Saturday night with friends on an estate near Hildesheim in the neighborhood of Hanover, and would probably arrive Monday at Oels, where it is his intention to "sojourn in his own castle." The departure of the Hohenzollern Prince from Wieringen, and his entry into Germany, does not seem to have caused the excitement in Berlin that might be expected. Popular opinion appears wholly disinclined to associate him with present or future nationalistic machinations, if only for the reason he is viewed as "wholly out of the running," in that he is considered a liability to any reactionary enterprise.

THE OLD REGIME

BRUSSELS, Nov. 12 — The former German Emperor received German passports for himself and suite this afternoon, according to the Gazette. It is expected, the paper adds, that the Hohenzollern Monarchy will be restored December 4th, the former Emperor or the Crown Prince ascending to the throne.

GENERAL ELECTION IN DECEMBER

LONDON, Nov. 12 — It is understood that the date for the dissolution of the British parliament has been decided upon and that it will be announced in parliament probably tomorrow. The Press Association states this evening one report says an election in December is on the programme.

Imperial Conference Issues Statement of the Sessions Work

Empire Defence Received Much Consideration. A Singapore Naval Base Is Considered Essential and a Large Air Force For Home Protection.

LONDON, Nov. 12 — An official summary of the Imperial Conference was made public to-day. On the matter of Empire defence, the Conference first declaring that the views and conclusions of the conference necessarily were subject to the action of the Government and parliaments of the various parts of the Empire suggested the following as guiding principles: The primary responsibility of each portion of the Empire represented at the Conference for its own local defence; the desirability of the maintenance of a minimum standard of naval strength, namely, equality with the naval strength of any foreign power in accordance with the provisions of the Washington treaty; the desirability of the development of air forces in several countries of the Empire upon such lines as will make possible as far as practical, of a common system of organization and training, and the use of uniform manuals and patterns of army equipment stores, with the exception of air craft, for each part

After the Secret Marriage

"I should like very much to see that portrait. It would be well worth a journey to Richmond to look upon the portrait of your mutual ancestress," said the Colonel with a bow that included both ladies.

Mrs. Shrewsbury and the two blondes agreed with him.

But Musa sat in wondering silence. She had never heard of the distant relationship existing between herself and Mrs. Carew, and never dreamed of any ancestress of hers in the profligate court of the second Charles.

Now, Mrs. Carew really had a very plausible picture to show, when the time should come to show it. But it was not a portrait of one of her foremothers.

It was, on the contrary, a portrait of herself. It had been painted in the early days of her brief married life, while she and her husband were staying in Paris, and by a French artist of great celebrity.

It represented Kate in a costume she had worn at a famous fancy ball in that city, at which she appeared as a French marchioness of the time of Louis the Fourteenth.

But the dress equally suited the court beauty of the time of Charles the Second.

And Mrs. Kate Carew always paraded that picture as the portrait of her ancestress, and there was no one to contradict her, but many to confirm her, on the sole ground of the likeness between her so-called ancestress and herself.

Soon after this, Colonel Carew arose to depart, saying that he could not leave his wife and daughter long in a strange hotel, for they would feel lonesome.

He invited the ladies present to call on Mrs. and Miss Carew. They promised to do so the very next day.

And so Colonel Carew bade them all good morning and left the house. When he was once more out in the air he drew a deep breath, and walked rapidly towards the avenue.

"Well," he said to himself, "she may pretend to talk of a common, a remote ancestress, by way of explaining the likeness, but it won't do, no, it won't do. Taking that extraordinary likeness, together with what has been told me, I see plainly that those two ladies are mother and daughter—mother and daughter! And besides the likeness to herself, there is sometimes an expression in the girl's face reminding one so forcibly of the Carews, that in fact there can be no doubt about her parentage. And if it is true that she is the daughter of Peter Carew, and Kate, his wife, then I fear that the rest that Wilks suspects is true. And she is such a beautiful woman with such charming manners! Could a woman so perfectly lovely be so very evil? I doubt it! I doubt it. But then the circumstances are so very strong against her. Only they did not seem to have any force at all, while I was looking at her and listening to her. Ah, well, if she is to be exposed and prosecuted, some one else must do it; I cannot. I thought I was a Samson, but I have found a Delilah. But, then she may not be guilty, strong as the circumstances are against her. And then, again, she may be. I don't know what to think."

And he didn't, nor did anyone else, who undertook to study Kate Carew. Days passed into weeks, and the Old Harry with his party lingered in the city, either forgetting all about the detective business that had first brought him there, or remembering it only to think what a prying, meddling, suspicious prig that Wilks fellow was, to be sure, and what a fool he himself had been to be influenced by him; and to thank his stars that he had not hinted the matter to Mrs. Carew, or to anyone else.

But in the meantime what of the recently married pair?

Their honeymoon was a very unusual one. They met every day in public, and every night in private. All their circle witnessed their public association. No one but old Cassy saw their private meeting until one unlucky night, when a domestic spy watched and detected them.

This spy was Armida Sutton. I have said before that she was a cold, ruthless girl. She had come to live with her foster-sister Musa, not for love, but from ambition.

Taken from her poverty-stricken farm-house among the hills and brought to her wealthy foster-sister's splendid mansion in Washington City, Armida Sutton felt no sense of obligation of thankfulness to her benefactress—felt only envy, hatred of the reigning beauty and wealthy heiress. She was dissatisfied with herself and disgusted with her position.

There is no passion so sharp-eyed as hatred.

And consequently Armida Sutton, who hated Musa as only traitors can hate their benefactors, soon suspected that there was something very odd, to say the least, between the young Earl of Cressy and the youthful lady of the house.

She communicated her suspicions to no one, and resolved to keep them a profound secret, and to constitute herself a sleepless spy upon the actions of Musa, in the hope of making some discovery that should give her the power to humble this queen, perhaps even to ruin this woman. One evening her perseverance was rewarded.

The earl had been spending an unusually quiet evening at Vermont Avenue. It happened to be Ash Wednesday, the first day of the Lenten season, and the ladies of the family being all "high church" women kept the day holy neither making visits nor receiving any, except those very intimate friends who at all times had the entrée of the house.

That evening, Lord Cressy was his only visitor. His lordship stayed until eleven o'clock. Just before he took leave he went over and sat by Musa and began talking of the grand style in which the Miserere had been rendered by the choir of St. John's Church, at the service that morning. Armida was not deceived by the public character of that topic. Moving about the room with seeming indifference, she quietly approached a bookstand behind the pair. There, unperceived by them, she began softly turning over the books, as if in search of something.

They spoke of the music for a moment longer, and then the young earl suddenly dropped his voice to the lowest tone and murmured a question:

"To-night, as usual, love?"
She answered in the same low tone:

"Yes, but earlier—twelve o'clock."

Then immediately she took up the subject of music again. Armida had heard enough. Selecting a book, she glided away from the table and resumed her seat on the sofa, where she began turning over the leaves of the volume, as if examining the engravings with which it was illustrated. When the young earl arose and took leave the family circle left the drawing room, and went to their several apartments. All immediately went to bed and to sleep, with two exceptions—Musa and Armida.

Musa, Countess of Cressy, sat in her sitting-room, waiting for the visit of her devoted young husband, whose earnest love had at length won some return of appreciative affection.

Armida's chamber was just across the broad middle hall, and opposite Musa's.

It was a front room with windows overlooking the street. Armida had lowered her gas to a mere blue speck, and sat at the window, peering thru a narrow opening of the shutter, to detect the coming of Lord Cressy.

At length she saw the figure of a man whom she recognised as Lord Cressy, swiftly and silently glide up to the street door. He did not knock or ring, but there he was.

Armida slipped off her shoes, and crossing her room in her stocking feet, knelt down at her door and peered thru the keyhole.

She saw old Cassy come softly out of Musa's dressing-room and creep noiselessly downstairs. She listened intently, but could not hear the old woman open the street door, whose locks were well oiled and worked silently. Neither could she hear footsteps coming up the thickly-carpeted stairs and hall. But by keeping her eye at the keyhole, she presently saw Lord Cressy attended by Cassy.

The old woman opened the door of Musa's room, admitted the earl, and then went back down the hall and out of Armida's limited range of vision.

Armida turped the key straight in the keyhole again and went and closed her shutter tightly, turned up the gas and looked at her watch. It was just three minutes past twelve.

"I see that my lord is punctual," she thought, with an ugly sneer. "It now remains to be seen at what hour he will depart."

Armida ought to have been as tired as any of her friends; but the eagerness of the detective and the excitement of the pursuit kept her awake, and insensible to fatigue.

She took off her elegant evening dress, the gift of Musa, and wrapped herself up in a quilted silk wrapper and sat down in her easy-chair by the glowing coal fire, to wait and watch for the departure of the young earl. It was a very weary vigil. Hour after hour passed, and no sound disturbed the profound stillness of the house.

The dawn was faintly showing thru the slats of the front hall window immediately above the street door, and dimly adding to the light given by the low gas burner near the head of the stairs, when her long vigil was rewarded with success.

Musa's door opened noiselessly and the Earl of Cressy came out, and glided down the hall and past her range of vision.

She arose softly from her knees, and went and opened the window shutter just wide enough to allow her to see the front steps. She saw the earl walking away from the house. She then closed the window and gloated over her success.

"And now," she said, "I have this peerless beauty in my power! Who would have thought it? I would have thought it. I did think it. She is the daughter of Musadora Percie. I always believed Musadora Percie to be more deeply criminal than her most unhappy husband ever suspected her to be. 'As the mother, so is the daughter.' That is true in this case, if it is not in every instance. And now I must try to go to sleep." (To be continued)

RANDOM COMMENTS

People want everybody except themselves to be perfect. A woman would have to wait a very long time to get the perfect man, and when she got him she would want to be dead in a week.

Praise, and not fault-finding, is the teacher's best weapon.

When you marry, your first duty is to your husband and not to your mother.

For the staggering price of a penny, or a possible threepenny-bit, people to-day expect a well-warmed church, a fine choir, excellent music, and a rattling good sermon.

German Disintegration.

(New York Journal of Commerce)

If the world had not become accustomed to calamity these developments would cause the most serious alarm. But as it is, France and Belgium appear largely unconcerned, we do nothing, and even Great Britain fails to intervene. Apparently Germany must go their hole way to collapse before anyone lifts a finger.

But if nothing is done, neither is anything expected. France is now thoroughly disillusioned regarding the collection of reparations. Great Britain is looking elsewhere for trade, and little is said in this country any more about the collection of our foreign debts.

More prisoners attribute their fall to betting than to any other cause.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

Now Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Washington, D. C.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved me from an operation which a physician said I would have to have for a very bad case of female trouble. My system was all run down for two years after my little girl was born. Then I read of your wonderful medicine and decided to try it. I could hardly drag one foot after the other, and after taking six bottles of the Vegetable Compound I felt like a new woman. I now do all my housework, also washing and ironing, and do not know what real trouble is. My health is fine, and I weigh 140 pounds. When I started taking it I weighed 97 pounds. I gladly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any one who is suffering from female trouble or is run down. You may use this testimonial for I am only too glad to let suffering women know what the Vegetable Compound did for me."—Mrs. Ida Hewitt, 1829 Penna. Ave. S.E., Washington, D.C.

Such letters from women in every section of this country prove beyond question the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

OBITUARY

MRS. MOORE

It is with regret that we chronicle to-day the death of an esteemed lady in the person of Mrs. M. Moore, of Torrington Cottage, Waterford Bridge Road. Deceased, who previous to her marriage was Miss Moore, came of one of the oldest and best known families in the West End, and had a large circle of friends who held her in highest esteem. She is survived by two sons, Laurie, travelling salesman for the Sherwin-Williams Paint Co., and Edward, Manager of the Knitting Mills; also one daughter, Mrs. H. Ross. The funeral will take place tomorrow at 2.30 p.m.

MAMIE KIRBY

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. James Kirby will be sorry to hear of the sudden passing on Saturday afternoon, of their daughter Mamie. Deceased, who was a pupil of the Presentation Convent, St. Patrick's, was of a cheerful and unselfish disposition, always ready to participate in any enjoyment that tended to the happiness of her friends. The call came with crushing suddenness. On Thursday she was at school, in the best of spirits and apparently as well as ever. Within forty-eight hours she was summoned home. Left to mourn beside her parents are her three sisters and brothers and a large circle of friends. The funeral took place yesterday.

Lower Island Cove Fishermen Will Back The Union and Coaker

Lower Island Cove.

November 6, 1924.

Editor, Evening Advocate.

Dear Sir,—Please allow me space in the columns of the Advocate for a few comments.

I am a solid F.P.U. man and have great faith in the Union and in the great work accomplished by President Sir William Coaker. I am determined, as all the fishermen at the present time are, to stand by the Union and write the name of the F.P.U. large in the history of the land.

I remember well the battle I fought in 1921 on the Badger road. I always took off my coat for Coaker when he was attacked by bitter enemies.

I believe Coaker and the Union have benefitted the fishermen greatly and those who may say they have not done so good see no further than their nose. Sir William has not got half praise enough for what he has done for the fishermen of this country. He is the only man who has had the pluck to see the battle to the finish. He was determined to fight the Union cause and he won, and if he had listened to talk he would never have gained his point.

President Coaker and his followers are to be congratulated on their great work in 15 years. I congratulate all Union men who stood by him in 1913 and in 1919 Tories, for the Union.

COAKER MAN.

The newly formed novelty musical company gave their first performance in St. Joseph's Hall last night and despite the many other attractions drew a large audience. Doran; stepdance, Mr. M. Day; vaudeville, Miss Adams and Mr. Peters; Piano Duet, Misses Doran and Warren, and selections by the C.C.C. Band. The second part was a farce comedy sketch in which the following performed:—Messrs. Peters, Phelan and Smith; Misses Nellie Byrne and Eileen Whalen. The show will be repeated to-night in the same hall and will be followed by a dance.

From The Masthead

By The Lookout.

Eugene V. Debs, the veteran leader of the American Socialist party, who polled 1,000,000 votes last general election, when he stood as his party's candidate for President, wrote a beautiful tribute to Dr. Charles P. Steinmetz, who was himself a life-long Socialist.

"The sudden and untimely death of Dr. Charles Proteus Steinmetz is a distinct loss to all the world," wrote Debs. "Dr. Steinmetz was in many respects a unique and striking personality. As an electrical genius he was known throughout the world, but it was as a humanitarian and as a lover of the common people and his passion to serve them, and to improve their condition and promote their happiness that he most completely fulfilled himself and will be best remembered by future generations."

"There is something touchingly pathetic and intensely dramatic about the career of this remarkable man. He was born in poverty and came to this country in the steerage. Upon landing at Ellis Island he had but his latent genius and $6 to commend him for favorable consideration for admission to the United States. For quite a time his case trembled in the balance. All of his external appearance was against him. He had a weak and deformed body and the authorities felt that he might become a charge upon the country and therefore decided that he was a subject for deportation."

"At this critical moment some friend providentially appeared upon the scene and so eloquently pleaded his cause that finally the authorities decided in his favor and he was admitted to the country. He had been a student of mathematics and of astronomical science and burned with the passion to develop his abilities and to consecrate himself to the service of mankind."

"It seems especially true in his case that nature is freakish in the bestowal of her gifts upon the children of men. Abraham Lincoln, greatest of Americans, and one of the sovereign figures in the world's history, was born in a wretched cabin, and the same was true of Robert Burns, whose poetry has touched the hearts of all the world and whose songs are known to every tongue. The commanding genius of Charlie P. Steinmetz, planted in the deformed, weak and unsightly body of a dwarf, is another evidence of nature's peculiar ways of compensating for her own inscrutable inflections."

"Dr. Steinmetz was limited in his humanitarian impulse and aspirations by the system in which he lived, in which by sheer force of necessity his genius was exploited by private interests for the accumulation of private fortunes. Had he come to the world in the system which he foresaw, believed in and aspired to, in a commonwealth of the people, in which the welfare of all was paramount, it is quite certain that his achievements would have been far greater than those which have marked him as one of the world's great benefactors."

"As men are remembered by their contributions to the advancement of human interests and to the promotion of the common welfare, so Dr. Steinmetz will be remembered gratefully by posterity for his inventions, his discoveries and the application of his great intellectual and spiritual resources to the promotion of the freedom and happiness of the human race."

Indeed a noble tribute from one grand man to another. I said in this column in referring to Dr. Steinmetz's death, that there are but few in this world whose passing I could mourn more. Eugene V. Debs is the only man in America whose death would mean a more poignant loss in my soul.

This glorious old man—he is seventy now—has been in the thick of the fight for the new emancipation, the emancipation of the workers for wage-slavery, for over forty years. Thrice has he entered prison on behalf of his principles. Thirty years ago, when he was President of the American Railwaymen's Union, he was sent by the corrupt courts, and again during the war when he was an old man, he was sent there by the war-mad patrioters whose

This grand old fighter for the new freedom, the freedom of mankind itself, is the man of whom Berthold, the famous sculptor of the "Statue of Liberty," said: "He is the greatest living American." This is the man of whom James Whitcomb Riley, America's beloved poet, said: "Gene Debs is the most lovable man I know." This is the man of whom practically every poet in America has had the warmest words and expressions of sentiment. This is the man who received a thousand poems written to him while he was in Atlanta Prison a year or two ago.

I have had the privilege and pleasure of meeting Eugene V. Debs, and I happen to know that he is greatly interested in the Fishermen's Protective Union of Newfoundland and in President Coaker.

ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND, TUESDAY, NOV. 13th., 1923.

This Year's Convention

MAY REVIEW PAST YEAR WITH A SENSE OF VICTORY.

The Union convention meeting this year will be able to review matters of the past year with the knowledge that victory has attended many F.P.U. efforts. At last year's convention the much discussed matter was the Humber project. The full weight of the F.P.U. was given in support of this great industrial undertaking, and it was largely to that influence that it was made a live issue.

The intervening year has seen the accomplishment of that policy, through the action of the people at the polls.

The Humber operations are now in full swing and the Union delegates can assemble at Port Union this year with the knowledge that their work has not been in vain.

It must also occur to every Union man that 1923 has been one of the greatest test times in the F. P. U.'s life. That it has withstood the strongest test imaginable and has triumphed will be recognized when the Union successfully brought their northern candidates back to the House of Assembly on May 3rd.

There never was such a political battle waged in this country. The struggle of 1913 and 1919 paled before the bitterness and unscrupulousness of the last election. Only stout union hearts could have resisted the onslaughts of last spring against F. P. U. institutions.

Lined up against the fishermen's organization was not only every merchant and pedlar, but every class of individual who could be bludgeoned into submission at a period when "times" were bad and when the supply question was a vital one. The F. P. U. won in the face of them. Since that outstanding victory, which demonstrated in such strong fashion the strength of the Union, a convention has not met. On Nov. 21st the delegates will meet in a year of victory, proud that they can rely on their own faith in their own organization.

Again, since last convention, His Majesty King George has been pleased to recognize the services to the country of the Union President and has conferred upon him the honour of knighthood. That Union men are proud of their chieftain and see, in this well-merited honor, a recognition of the benefits of Unionism to Newfoundland, was evidenced by the general outburst of approval contained in the flood of congratulations, published in this paper.

Regarding the vital matter of fishery conditions, it is now generally recognized that President Coaker's attitude has been clearly confirmed by the conditions now affecting the fishermen. Since the downfall of the first attempt to give the country a sane policy along fishery lines, a downfall that was encompassed by certain merchants and politicians, the years have shown conditions growing from bad to worse. It will be only reasonable, therefore, to expect that a strong stand will be taken by the fishermen at Port Union next week after they have considered this vital matter. That the F. P. U. will not fail in its duty regarding the conditions, under which fishermen have been forced to catch fish for the exploitation of those who export it, is an assured fact. Its whole influence will be directed towards a proper recognition of the fishermen's case on the part of those who now control the destiny of both the fishermen and the country.

This year's convention will probably see the greatest debate on fishery matters ever held by a body of fishermen in this country.

From reports now arriving, the convention will have a record representation this year, as it is widely realised that the time has come when fishermen must collaborate their views and take a united stand on matters which vitally affect them.

A British Policy In Europe

1---The Present Weakness

By J. RAMSAY MacDONALD, M.P.

I have just been reading a poetical account of how kindly Nature is smoothing out from the face of the land the wrinkles and scars of war; how the grass and the flowers grow where the mud engulfed men; how new and prosperous homes rise where, but a year or two ago, wrecked villages were included in Cooks' Tours. I can assure anyone who, reading such things, feels content, that Nature seems to be far more responsive to healing influences than man. At the end of five years of official peace, not a trench dug in the human heart, so far as it is effective in government, not a barbed-wire entanglement set up in it, has disappeared. Here, the war has destroyed, and has done little else.

It is true that in the ebb and flow of recent events our country has slightly recovered itself. But I must emphasise that what I have heard has made it quite clear that if there are still trust and hope in us (and, especially amongst the small nations, those exist mingled with doubt), it is because in the policy of the Powers dominating Europe today the liberal sections in all nations miss the qualities which the last generation taught them to expect from Britain. Our Governments have benefited not so much by what they themselves have done as by the reactions against the policies of other Governments and the attitude of the Opposition.

Everywhere I have met with a feeling that the victors have been mistaken, that they have been deluded in their ways and pursuits, that they must return to general reconstruction and the demands of justice; and everywhere there is a hope that Great Britain may become active in leading to that Europe is getting sick of Napoleonism. Therefore, my general conclusion is that whilst in Governments there may be no change, whilst vain men gain some reputation from vociferous sections in their own States for empty triumphs, the general mind turns away from them and looks for other voices and other leading. Things have been allowed to go so far wrong that they cannot be righted in a day; wisdom will be frowned at at first as hostility by some Governments, perhaps; but the supreme need of Europe now is that the liberal elements in all the nations should be drawn together, should be made to live, and should get a lead in a comprehensive policy of pacification and reconstruction.

This is the position as I see it after having crossed Europe. Our policy has been amateurish, feeble, uncertain, and, as in the case of recent speeches by Lord Curzon, when we have scored by our attitude we have injured ourselves by our comments. We have, therefore, almost ceased to count except as a hope (a no mean asset, however, if used). But do not let us deceive ourselves as to our present position. To whatever school we may belong, we can see little but failure in British foreign policy. If we are militarists, as a military Power we are too weak to have initiative. The Singapore folly, as a piece of world strategy, is extravagant and ill-conceived; if we believe in wise diplomacy and moral rectitude, as a political power we have been too flabby, and as a moral power too tainted since 1918 to have authority and respect (I repeat, much is hoped of us yet); if we pin our faith to the purse, we have failed to use our economic power even to influence creditor nations. Hence to listen to the pity of our best friends is more galling than to be assailed by the reproaches of our worst enemies.

The error committed by our responsible representatives was to allow Europe to fall into the language and thought of militarism and imperialism without an attempt to lead it on to a different path. In the military game we are weak, and the genius and heart of our people do not lie in that way. Our nations instinctively feel that to be true, and regard us as essentially a political and a Liberal people, and because the Labor Party has come to represent to the Continent that liberal mind and policy, its present position in British politics has been the most powerful single factor in keeping

FOR DRIVING

- 1-Drive on the right side of the road, it's just as good as the left.
- 2-Slow down when approaching a crossroad; it is nearly as dangerous as a railroad crossing.
- 3-Look out for children. You can never tell what they'll do, and you are always in the wrong if you hit them.
- 4-Try to help instead of hinder the traffic officer; he's there for your good, and he's got a tough job.
- 5-Be sure that your "dimmers" really dim, it's no joke driving into a blinding glare—you probably know?
- 6-Read and obey the warning signs, they're not put up as ornaments.
- 7-If you feel you've got to speed, do it where it won't kill anybody but yourself.
- 8-When making minor repairs, stop where your car may be seen from both directions; otherwise you may stop longer than you anticipate.
- 9-Speeding around corners is a straight route to the hospital. Don't race past a stopped street car. Some day the jury may call it manslaughter.
- 10-Use discretion. The fact that you had the right of way don't bring anybody back to life, least of all yourself.

Declares Colorado
Was Inhabited
3,000 Years Ago

DURANGO, Colo., Nov. 10.—(A.P.)—A race ante-dating the Christian era by 1,000 years inhabited the Southwest, is the statement made here recently by Jesse Nusbaum, superintendent of the Mesa Verde national park, Colorado, after the uncovering of a house said to have been inhabited by a people long before the cliff dwellers arrived in the section now known as the Mesa Verde National Park.

The Nusbaum discovery was made about eight feet beneath the floor, or foundation, of a cliff dwelling and in the same cavern, located about a mile south of the Spruce Tree house in the park. The tribe, according to Nusbaum and other members of the party that unearthed the house, belonged to what are known as the "basket-makers," and their presence here was established beyond a doubt by the class of pottery discovered in the house, it was said.

This pottery, Nusbaum asserts, is easily identified as of a period at least 1,000 years before Christ, and other evidence was found to justify the statement that this region was inhabited by humans long before the cliff dwellers arrived. The pottery is of a crude clay, tempered with cedar bark, a process used by the earliest ancients. It has a adobe color with a slight pinkish cast.

TORONTO, Nov. 10.—The completion by the Provincial Highway Commission of the asphaltum surfacing of the Kingston road, through to Whitby and Oshawa, marks an important event in highway construction in the province of Ontario, and an expenditure approximately of $5,000,000. The work of improving the Kingston road started under the administration of the Hearst Government.

Already the travel eastward over the highway has enormously increased, traffic counts made on Sundays showing over 1,000 motor cars to the hour.

WHAT SCIENCE SAYS

Mr. W. L. Scott, the great English chemist, says: "After exhaustive analysis I have no hesitation in certifying absolutely pure Zam-Buk. It contains none of the impure animal fats and irritating minerals found in ordinary ointments. The antiseptic and bactericidal powers of Zam-Buk exceed those of carbolic acid, without inflaming, the most tender skin."

"IT SAVED MY HAND"

"A sore on my finger turned to blood-poisoning. After fruitless attempts to cure it, I applied Zam-Buk. The hand and arm became terribly swollen and inflamed. Doctors again operated, scraped the bone in vain. Had hand must be amputated. I refused and used Zam-Buk. I persevered and complete healing resulted. Believe if I had used Zam-Buk first I would have saved my hand."—(Red.) John L. L. L., N.S.

A MINISTER'S TRIBUTE

Rev. A. D. McLeod, of Harcourt, N.B., writes: "I know of nothing like Zam-Buk. Visiting through out an extensive mission, I see many sick and afflicted people, and have been amazed at the good Zam-Buk is doing daily. For old wounds, bad ulcers, eczema, and all skin diseases, it is unexcelled."

A TALK TO WOMEN

When you spend your money, don't you like to get the best possible value? If so, when next you need a household ointment, buy Zam-Buk. Why? Here are a few reasons.

How long will a jar of dripping soap good? When it turns rancid would you like to apply it to a sore place? Now most ordinary ointments have animal fats and oils as a base. These are disguised by perfumes and coloring matter, but that does not make matters better. Zam-Buk, on the contrary, is free from all fats and oils and animal products that may go rancid. Zam-Buk is made from pure herbal essences and juices—

Natural Healers; Nature's own remedies. Many ointments contain mineral compounds such as lead, zinc, etc., and coloring matters. Zam-Buk does not. Its coloring is the green of the herbs of the field.

Zam-Buk being made from nature's own healing balms, is more powerful than ordinary ointments—better value. It can heal where other remedies fail. Read the extraordinary case of Mrs. Jeffrey in panel No. 1.

Zam-Buk, as soon as applied to an injury or skin trouble, kills all disease germs and prevents blood poisoning, inflammation, etc. Professor Scott, the great English Chemist, experimented with Zam-Buk in this connection. Read his findings in panel No. 1.

Zam-Buk draws from a wound or sore all the poison before healing. Read how it thus saved Mr. Evans' hand, (panel No. 2.)

Zam-Buk, if applied to skin diseases, injuries, etc., will save you money, pain, and perhaps save a limb. In the case reported in panel No. 5.

Zam-Buk is best for children. Scores of mothers have proved this. In a nutshell, here are Zam-Buk's elements of superiority—It is herbal—not fatty. It is pure—not adulterated by minerals hidden by cheap perfume. It is antiseptic—kills all germs. It is the most powerful known healer. It does more and goes further. It keeps indefinitely—never goes bad. It is suitable alike for the skin of adults and of children—even babies. It cures old and stubborn skin diseases, as well as injuries and diseases of recent date. Its price is within the reach of everybody. Only 50c. per box; 3 for $1.25. Zam-Buk, like diamonds, is limited. Protect yourself, insist on the genuine Zam-Buk.

USE ZAM-BUK FOR

Some Thoughts for the Quiet Hour

PATH OF DUTY

And as the path of duty is made plain,
May grace be given that I may walk therein,
Not like the hireling, for his selfish gain,
With backward glances and reluctant tread.

Making a merit of his coward dread,—
But, cheerful, in the light around me thrown,
Walking as one to pleasant service led;
Doing God's will as if it were my own.

Yet trusting not in mine, but in His strength alone!
—J. G. Whittier.

Reflect upon your present blessings, of which every man has many; not on your past misfortune, of which all men have some.—Charles Dickens.
And one should give a gleam of happiness whenever it is possible.—Geo. Eliot.

THIS DAY

I AM resolved to meet the morning of this new day with faith and hope and courage, and thus strike hands with all the finer forces of energy and power.

I AM resolved to realize and to remember that thoughts are forces, that like builds like, and that like attracts like, that thoughts of strength build strength from within and attract it from without, and that courage therefore begets success.

I AM resolved, therefore, that as the life always and inevitably follow the thought, and as it is the man or woman of faith and hope and hence of courage, who is the matter of circumstances, to sit as master at the helm, and thus determine what course I take, what points I touch, what haven I reach.

—Ralph Waldo Trine.

DUTY

The world is full of duties that demand attention, but they are not all our duties. Some of them are, of course—a whole shoulder load of them. Yet we cannot do everything. If there is anywhere that heavenly direction is needed, it is in choosing what is most important.

Aunt: "What became of the kitten you had when I was here before?"

Little Niece (in surprise): "Why, don't you know?"

"I haven't heard a word. Was she poisoned?"

"No, aunt."

"Drowned?"

"Oh, no."

"Stolen?"

"No, indeed."

"Hurt in any way?"

"No."

"Well, I can't guess. What became of her?"

"She grew into a cat."

ENGLISH PLAYWRIGHTS DEMANDING THEIR SHARE OF PROFITS

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—(A.P.)—American playwrights have decided to make an effort to wrest from the managers and actors a third share in the American theatres as a means of lifting of intellectual and artistic standards of native dramatic art. This is the assertion of Owen Davis, one-time president of the American Dramatists and Composers, and now a leading spirit in American Dramatists, a guild of the Authors League of America.

"We" Mr. Davis said to-day, "who are the backbone and the brains of the American stage, go unnoticed while actors and managers struggle for control of the theatre, and while the stage is permitted to give the public only a fraction of the beauty and artistry it might give if directed by persons of wider horizon and greater intelligence." He pointed out that actors and managers now were arrayed against each other in a fight for control of the stage and that, meanwhile, both dramatists and plays were given scant if any attention by either of the warring factions.

"In the old days of the American stage the dramatic author was all-powerful, and he is even today in many European countries," Mr. Davis declared, "yet in this country no one pays any attention to him or to the great public of Americans he serves. Five years ago a large number of actors went on strike in New York. They did not consult us. The theatres were closed. Our plays were suspended or left unproduced. When actors and managers settled the strike, again we were not consulted."

"Next June the Actors Equity Association intends to strike for an Equity shop; the managers will refuse the demand, I know. We, the authors who constitute the one creative and the all-important element in the situation of play production, will be represented on either board. We will lose no matter who wins."

"Therefore the American Dramatists have been driven to take an aggressive position, to demand a third voice in the theatre, to demand that excellence of the theatre rather than control of it be the most important object for all of us, managers, actors and authors."

"Until we authors are occasionally consulted in the business direction, we cannot hope for a better theatre. If we cannot get a hearing from actors and managers, then as a group we will be forced into active production. But we prefer to avoid this because we realize that the actor or author who becomes a manager, becomes primarily a manager."

"The solution I have to offer is simple. Yet I believe it will prevent haggling over control of the stage and will permit also the production of better plays."

"Let all difference of opinions among authors, actors and managers over ethics, business and other matters, be submitted to a jury composed of an equal number of each group. This jury should be able to make and enforce its decisions through a sort of boycott system. If an actor, manager, or author refuse to abide by a decision he will be boycotted by all the rest."

"This system will prevent strikes; it will do much more than that in bringing into the choice of plays for production the voice of men who are interested in beauty as well as money."

Says Labor Party Ready For Straight Fight

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Addressing a labor meeting in London to-night, Ramsay MacDonald, leader of the Opposition, said that he would to-morrow challenge the Government in Parliament on its unemployment policy and its European policy, which has sacrificed every ideal and left Europe more militaristic and more warlike than in 1913. ## Mrs. Timberlake makes her specialty, Chicken Delight, with Libby's Milk

A place where exceptionally delicious foods are temptingly served is Tim's T. Table in Lynchburg, Virginia.

And among all the good things served there, none is more popular than Chicken Delight. It's a specialty of Mrs. Timberlake's, a dish that she makes as you do your favorite—with every care to have it perfect.

That she uses Libby's Milk in it, as shown by the recipe above, is just another bit of evidence that this milk is best for cooking purposes.

Thousands of other good cooks are using it regularly; so many of them, in fact, that Libby's is now generally known as "the milk that good cooks use."

Chicken Delight

Recipe from Mrs. T. Timberlake, Lynchburg, Va.

1 cup chicken stock      1/2 cup Libby's Milk
(or 1/2 stock, 1/2 water)      1/2 cup sifted flour
Blend flour with the cold liquid and heat to boiling, stirring constantly; cook fifteen minutes and add:
1 pint tomato      1/2 green pepper
1/2 cup mushrooms      Salt and pepper
1/2 cup celery (cut in      1/2 tablespoon Sherry O small pieces and      1 hard-boiled egg parboiled till ten-      1 cup chicken meat
der)      (cut in small pieces)
Heat slowly and serve on toast garnished with parsley. This makes six generous servings.

7 1/2 teaspoons of butter fat in every can

They notice, as you will, that anything made with Libby's Milk has greater richness, finer flavor. It must, for there are 7 1/2 teaspoons of pure butter fat in every 16 oz. can of this milk—the very same butter fat that makes cream and butter such great enrichers of foods.

Cow's milk made double rich. Unlike ordinary milk, you see, Libby's Milk comes only from selected herds in the finest dairy sections of the country—those places where ideal pasture lands abound, and where men specialize in raising cows that give exceptionally rich milk.

Not only that. At our condenseries in the heart of these favored dairy sections, we remove more than half the moisture from this fine milk, making it double rich.

Nothing is added to it; none of its food values taken away. But to bring it safely to you who live, perhaps, many hundreds of miles away we must seal it in air-tight cans and sterilize it.

Have richer dishes tonight

Order a can of Libby's Milk from your grocer today. Try it tonight in one of your favorite dishes, in place of ordinary milk. See what wholly new richness it gives. And what fine flavor. You'll want Libby's Milk for all your cooking!

Write for free recipe folder

Upon request we'll gladly send you, free, a copy of a new folder which contains a number of excellent recipes sent us by good cooks who use Libby's Milk.

BUCHAREST EXPLOSION CREATES DESTRUCTION

BUCHAREST, Nov. 11.—Many persons were killed and scores wounded when Fern Domestini, on the outskirts of the capital, blew up yesterday. For many hours the city was imperilled by bursting shells. The damage is reported to be heavy.

FRENCH ATTITUDE DEBARS THE UNITED STATES

Britain Abandons Expert Conference

LONDON, Nov. 12.—In consequence of the failure of the negotiations between France and the United States over the scope of the proposed Expert Committee, Great Britain has abandoned all thought of an immediate reparations enquiry either with or without the participation of France. The British government will henceforth devote itself to pressing domestic problems, awaiting a more promising moment to re-open the Reparations question. The government authorities repudiate the recent talk about any impending break with France, arguing that the existence of the entente is the only anchor whereby the European ship of state can be prevented from going on the rocks.

CROWN PRINCE'S RETURN VIEWED WITH ALARM

PARIS, Nov. 10.—While the Inter-Allied Council looked on with alarm, former Crown Prince Frederick Wilhelm left his exile on Wieringen Island, Holland, before dawn this morning and returned back to his estate in Silesia from which he had been driven in disgrace five years ago; when the military aspirations of him and his father, the former Kaiser, were finally dashed to the ground and a revolution robbed them of their dignity in the Fatherland. The former Crown Prince made the move with the full accord of both Dutch and German Governments, and a note was despatched at once by the President of the Allied Council of Ambassadors, Premier Poincaré, to the German Chancellor D'Auffays asking that the Council might be notified at once if the German Government had sanctioned the move, and adding that although news despatches said the permission had been granted by Berlin the Allied Governments refused to believe the German Government could have taken a decision of such gravity, whatever may be the motives advanced to justify it. Despatches from Berlin stated that permission had been granted the former Crown Prince to return to Silesia, providing he travelled by automobile and did not stop at Berlin.

WILHELM THANKS THE DUTCH

THE HAGUE, Nov. 10.—In a farewell message posted in Wieringen, following the departure of the former Crown Prince for Germany, Frederick Wilhelm thanks the people cordially and explains that a personal farewell was impossible, because his departure under such conditions would have been difficult. "In a desperate plight, slandered and roofless, I came to Wieringen in November, 1918, and here I quickly found rest and human sympathy. I say good-bye to you and wish all that is best for the future. Many thanks (H) we meet again."

NEWSPAPERS DISCUSS PRINCE'S STUNT

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The former Crown Prince's startling flight into Germany is featured conspicuously in London's daily papers, which speculate on whether the Allies will force Germany to give Frederick Wilhelm up. The press makes much of the fact that the Prince was allowed to depart from Holland and enter Germany in fact of the strong declaration by the Allies against his return.

NOT AT OELS

OELS, Nov. 12.—The former Crown Prince has not arrived at Oels up to eight o'clock to-night. There is no of the country on the vexed controversy as to where he spent the day of protection versus free trade. Saturday, Sunday or to-day.

Boxing and Wrestling Tournament

The preliminary bouts for the boxing and wrestling championships were run off in the C.L.B. Armoury last night before a large gathering of fans. The bout between Caul and Moore was of an especially exciting nature, Caul knocking out Moore after 1 minute, 56 seconds. A twenty foot square ring was erected in the centre of the Armoury with seats on all sides. In the boxing contests for two-minute rounds were fought with an interval of a minute between each round. Five points were awarded to the winner at the end of each round, and a lesser number to his opponent, according to merit. The duration of the wrestling bout was fifteen minutes, and no fall was registered in the time. Hall vs. Chancey in the featherweight class were the only wrestlers last night; this was won on points by Chancey. The following is the boxing programme: Flyweight—Burgess 101 lbs. vs. Jones, 109 lbs. Won by Burgess on points. Bishop, 109 lbs. vs. Macklin, 111 lbs. Won by Macklin on points.

Caul, 112 lbs. vs. Moore, 108 lbs. Won by Caul on knockout, 1 min., 56 secs. Welterweight—Stamp 144 lbs. vs. Chislett, 141 lbs. Won by Stamp on points. The finals for the championships of Newfoundland will take place to-morrow night when there will be 3 wrestling and six boxing bouts.

The following are guests at Balsam Place: Eugene Baggs, Curling; W. H. Conrad, Halifax; J. Coady, Hrbreten; Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Goodyear, Grand Falls.

Nova Scotia's Fish Catch Is Short

The season's catch of codfish, to be dried or pickled cured for export, being practically finished, approximately correct figures can now be given covering the Nova Scotia catch. The Lunenburg fleet on the early Spring trip produced 20,000 quintals; on the second trip 35,000 quintals; on the summer trip 120,000 quintals; headline fleet 7,000 quintals; a total of 182,000 quintals. The total for 1922 was 317,000. The average for ten years, 1913-22 was 240,000 so that the year's catch was 135,000 quintals under 1922 and 58,000 under the ten years' average. The short catch and low prices mean a heavy loss on the operations of the Lunenburg fleet, and it is feared will result in a serious reduction in the 1924 fleet of fishing vessels. The 1922 fleet consisted of 100 vessels; 1923, 76 vessels. The latest news from Lunenburg is that a sale of the summer catch had been made last week at $6.25 a price, but it may be that shortage of domestic supplies will make it possible. The early Spring catch sold at $5.80 and the second at $5.50 Lunenburg—Maritime Merchant. The card party and dance under the auspices of the T. A. Ladies' auxiliary advertised for to-night has been postponed until next Tuesday.

G. W. V. A. Place Wreath

On Sunday, Armistice Day, the executive of the G.W.V.A. accompanied by Rev. T. Nangle, C.F., proceeded to the Sergeant's Memorial Garrison Hill, at 11 o'clock where a wreath of poppies was placed on the memorial by Vice-President Crocker in the absence of President Baird. After the placing of the wreath the two minutes silence was observed by those present.

LATEST

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The Earl of Balfour, in a speech in London last evening, scouted as grotesque the nonsensical suggestion that in fortifying Singapore, Great Britain would be trespassing upon the principle of the Washington Conference and taking mean advantage of a technical point of which neither Japan nor the United States government were aware. He declared that Singapore was deliberately omitted from the Pacific agreement reached at Washington conference.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—Today's meeting of parliament was merely a resumption of the session interrupted by the summer vacation, and was not marked by any ceremony such as attends the opening of a new session when the King appears in state and the speech from the throne is read. The Ambassadors decided German message be referred to their Governments.

BERLIN, Nov. 13.—The latest reports from Munich are to the effect that the authorities there are in full control of the situation. No disorder occurred yesterday although the feeling was still tense.

Shooting Accident

MR. W. A. MEWS INJURED BY SHOT FROM PARTNER'S GUN.

Yesterday afternoon a shooting accident occurred near Bay Bulls when Mr. Wilfred A. Mews of the firm of Carnell and Mews Freshwater Road, was shot in the face by Mr. Carnell of the same firm. Taking advantage of the holiday the injured man and his partner proceeded by motor car yesterday morning to the barrens inside Bay Bulls, for a day's shooting. They had wandered apart, out of sight of each other, when a covey of birds was raised and both fired at the same time. Mr. Mews brought down a bird, but unknowingly he was standing in the line of Mr. Carnell's gun, some shot from which struck him in the face. His cries brought Mr. Carnell to his side, who got him back to the car and speedily rushed him to Bay Bulls where a telephone call was sent to the Inspector General asking that a doctor be sent out. The services of Drs. O'Reilly and Fox were immediately secured, and with Head Constable Peet, they motored to the scene, when it was found that the man was not so seriously injured as feared; one shot in his eye being the most dangerous.

After the medical men had dressed the wounds, Mr. Mews was brought to town and taken to the hospital. On enquiry of the General Hospital at 1 p.m., we learn that Mr. Mews is not as seriously injured as was thought at first. He is not suffering any pain and the injured eye will be attended to this afternoon.

A girl from a nearby outpost who has recently been released from the penitentiary was again before the court on a loose and disorderly charge. She was given a chance to go home. A native of this city who recently returned from Eng. where he spent 2 years in the workhouse, asked to be sent down for 10 days. ### The Fishermen's Protective Union

Our Union Councils will be active during the coming weeks preparing for the convention at Port Union.

The conventions are always looked forward to, with a great deal of interest, for, as the Advocate points out, a convention is a highly representative body of fishermen and workmen. Their getting together for discussion of their problems with so many of their members in the House of Assembly never fails of good results.

The Convention has a great educational value for not the delegates only, but for the local Councils, who hear the delegates' report of convention proceedings and business upon the delegates' return.

Of course, Union fishermen are always in the fortunate position to know "what is going on regarding public and other matters. It is a fact, as has been declared before, the average Union-man knows more about public matters than those walking up and down Water Street. It is the usual that Union men know what is going on about two weeks before non-Union men get it by hearsay or through the press. This is where non-Union men are behind Union men. The F. P. U. Council is a kind of intelligence medium for the fishermen of the north. But, nevertheless, after a whole year, there is much business which cannot be handled through individual Councils. It is necessary to get the Councils together. That is the idea of the Supreme Council of the F.P.U. It gets the Councils together; that is, it gets the fishermen-body together, in convention, in their district meetings and in their various political and commercial groups.

In this, there is a real democracy. The fishermen are the F. P. U. They meet yearly to conduct their own business.

The charge that fishermen have no say in their Union matters is a monstrous lie, calculated to deceive and destroy.

So it is, that we are thinking of the present gathering of the north at Port Union. Let us hope that success will attend the efforts of all concerned and that President Sir Wm. Coaker will be able to advise recommendations for the many problems which confront the country at the present time.

Rosalind is due New York to-morrow a.m.

Silvia is leaving Halifax noon to-day.

WEDDING BELLS

O'DRISCOLL-FITZGERALD

On Friday evening, November 2nd, at the home of the bride's parents at Fogo, an interesting and pretty wedding was solemnized when the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Fitzgerald, became the bride of Mr. Patrick O'Driscoll of St. John's. Rev. Dr. Jones, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, Tilling, officiated at the nuptial ceremony.

The bride was beautifully gowned in stashes of roses georgette over satin, with hat to match, and carried a gorgeous bouquet of maidenhair ferns and chrysanthemums.

Miss Rita Jones was bridesmaid. She was daintily attired in a modish creation of navy blue silk and tulle, and carried a large bouquet of asparagus fern and carnations.

The best man was Mr. J. E. Fitzgerald, brother of the bride.

The groom's present to the bridesmaid was an exquisite gold Rosary, and to the best man a gold stick-pin.

After the bride and groom had received the congratulations of their friends, a bountiful supper, served from a daintily arrayed table, was held at the Fitzgerald home, the guests being limited to immediate relatives and a small circle of intimate friends. There was an air of quiet elegance in evidence, the affair being marked by a lack of ostentation and quite in keeping with the times.

At the wedding supper, which followed the reception, Rev. Dr. Jones, in proposing the health of the bride, paid a tribute to her faithful and spontaneous activity in connection with church-benefit affairs, the Altar Guild, etc., with which she has been prominently identified for a number of years, but especially as organist of the Church of Our Lady of the Snows, at Fogo, where her painstaking and musical skill will be sorely missed and quite difficult to replace.

The groom, in a few well chosen words, responded. After refreshments were served the guests made merry until the departure of the bridal couple for the coastal steamer Clyde, where the newly-weds were given a royal send-off by friends who accompanied them to the pier. The happy pair left by the Clyde at an early hour on Saturday morning for their future home in St. John's, where the groom holds an important position with the Imperial Life Insurance Company.

The bride, who is a social favorite in her home district, was the happy recipient of many useful presents. Fogo, Nov. 2nd, 1923.
